THE almost universal possession of at least a good common-school education by members of the Society of Friends, is generally conceded. Among the establishments in America which have contributed to this, Westtown Boarding School occupies a prominent position. Most of the families of Friends within the limits of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, and many in surrounding parts, have each contributed one or more to swell the number of students; in many cases all the members have in succession passed some portion of time at the institution. And such is its age, that those who now assemble within its walls are the grandchildren of those first enrolled as students. Patronized thus extensively, it has also served another important purpose. It has been a point of common interest to all classes, and the acquaintances there formed by those just on the threshold of active life, have bound together in closer union the members from distant sections of the country. To those with whom the name of Westtown has thus become very familiar, who retain pleasant recollections of the time spent there, and who wish to possess, in a form convenient for reference, most of the accessible information relating to the School, it is hoped the present compilation will prove acceptable.

The short history, prepared by the aid of some members of the committee in charge of the institution, will be found to chronicle the important events, in connection with the origin and progress of the concern, and the means by which the school attained its present condition. In the preparation of other matter included in the volume, the records in possession of the book-keeper and librarian were resorted to. With what degree of correctness these were kept in past times, will be best known should these pages meet the eyes of those who alone are competent to verify the entries,—the many whose names are herein enrolled. Care has been taken to follow the records in all essential particulars.

The use of register numbers is peculiar to Westtown, but the system is so well understood by its patrons, that it was believed no other order of arrangement would serve so well in a work of this kind. It corresponds generally with the chronological order, and most persons will turn readily to their own entries. It is to be regretted that a more uniform policy was not pursued at all times in the assignment of numbers. In the earlier years of the school, students returning after an absence, in some cases received new numbers. From this cause, the highest register number issued does not indicate truly the number of different persons entered. These re-admissions, when known to the compiler, were omitted in the second instance, and a summary on page 289 shows the result.

To obviate all difficulty in finding particular names, as well as to group together those of one family name, a complete alphabetical index has been added. In cases where students have in after years been connected with the school as officers or otherwise, the same has been indicated by reference in the index.

Only those who have attempted a labor of this kind can realize the difficulty experienced in regard to the spelling of many names. In the space of seventy years, some families change the spelling slightly, or a branch but distantly related may adopt a different spelling as a distinction, or names pronounced exactly alike, but spelled differently, may lead to confusion in many ways. Hence, it will not be surprising if persons bearing the name of Baily (Bailey), Ballinger (Ballenger), Evans (Evens), Lea (Lee), Philips (Phillips), Swain (Swayne), Eayre (Eyre), or any one of a score of other like doubtful names, will notice a spelling unlike that generally used by them.

The frontispiece, although most of the large trees in the vicinity have been omitted, in order to show the buildings, will yet, it is hoped, convey a tolerably correct impression of the place, and show to those who have not visited it since 1869-70 the location of the boys' school-building.

The compiler wishes to express his obligation to many Friends for encouragement and assistance in the prosecution of the labor. Especially is he indebted to the present Superintendent and Matron, Aaron and Susanna F. Sharpless, whose extensive acquaintance with those connected with the school for many years past, rendered their advice and assistance peculiarly valuable.

The result of many days' pleasant employment is herewith submitted, hoping that The History and General Catalogue of Westtown School may suggest to many the thought of how much they owe to the institution in its past, and at the same time tend to perpetuate that degree of interest which will insure its usefulness in the future.

NOTE TO THIRD EDITION.

THE stereotype plates of this work being now the property of the Committee in charge of Westtown School, this edition is issued under their supervision. The Historical sketch has been extended, and the Catalogue made complete to the summer of 1884 by the addition of about one thousand names of officers and students not in former editions.

EDUCATION AMONG EARLY FRIENDS.

THE ministry of George Fox began in the year 1647. Only a short time elapsed before those who came to have a common bond of interest in the adoption of the doctrines he taught, turned their attention to the care and instruction of the youth. A history of the educational movement in the Society of Friends would, therefore, cover nearly the same period as the history of the Society itself. To what extent private schools were established and patronized at that early day, we know not. In the journal of George Fox, under date of 1667, occurs the following (page 409):

“I advised the setting up of a school there (at Waltham) for teaching boys; also a woman’s school to be opened at Shackelwell for instructing girls and young maidens in whatsoever things were civil and useful in the creation.”

This advice seems to have been at once acted upon. In four years from that time there were reported to be fifteen boarding schools in operation. These, of course, were small, and became wholly insufficient, as the number to be taught increased.

London Yearly Meeting strove to impress upon both subordinate meetings and individuals the importance of providing for the education of the children of Friends in schools under the care of members of the Society. From 1700 to 1740 there were earnest appeals, issued by that body annually, in reference to their literary as well as religious instruction. The following is the advice of the Yearly Meeting in 1706 :

“ And forasmuch as, next to our own souls, our children and offspring are the most immediate objects of our care and concern, it is tenderly recommended to all that are or may be parents or guardians of children, that they be diligently exercised in this care and concern for the education of those committed to their charge ; that, in their tender years, they may be brought to a sense of God, — his wisdom, power, omnipresence, so as to beget an awe and fear of Him in their hearts (which is the beginning of wisdom); and, as they grow up in capacity, to acquaint them with and bring them up in the frequent reading of the Scriptures of Truth, and also to instruct them in the great love of God, through Jesus Christ and the work of salvation by Him, and of sanctification through His blessed Spirit ; and also to keep them out of the vain and foolish ways of the world, and in plainness of language, habit, and behaviour, that, being thus instructed in the way of the Lord when they are young, they may not forget it when they are old.”

Some of the difficulties of a later day are shadowed forth in the following extract :

“ The want of proper persons among Friends — qualified for schoolmasters — has been the occasion of great damage to the Society in many places.

“ We desire Friends would, in their monthly meetings, assist young men of low circumstances, whose genius and conduct may be suitable for that office, with the means requisite to obtain the proper qualifications ; and, when so qualified, afford them the necessary encouragement for their support." (Minutes London Yearly Meeting, 1715.)

A particular description of the various efforts made in compliance with the oft expressed concern of London Yearly Meeting will not be here attempted. They finally resulted in the establishment of a national boarding school at Ackworth in 1779. This institution, through the liberality and constant care of Friends, was made an instrument of great good to the youth of the Society. It continues in operation at the present time. The number of scholars admitted since its commencement in 1779, to 1871, was 8,753.

Should any one query what kind of an education early Friends desired for their children, abundant material for an answer could be found in the recorded minutes of that period. While they, in common with all other classes, were satisfied with a course of study very much shorter than that now considered essential, it cannot be denied that the prevailing standard was a liberal one. When we view the subject in connection with the state of schools among other classes, their plan of education seems surprisingly broad and practical. An emphatically religious education was desired — an education, which, while it made the mind the receptacle of such human wisdom as would conduce to the greatest usefulness upon earth, encouraged that obedience to the manifestations of Divine grace which would restrain and bring under right control the natural propensities of the child. That which puffeth up was to find no place, while that which teaches the accountability that must attach to all human action, and the due subordination of all desires and feelings to the one great end of man's existence on earth, was to be the corner-stone of the system. The spirit which animated many, is shown in the advice to parents to "be good examples in all things, as become men and women professing godliness, that good footsteps may be left by us to future generations, which may be helpful to the preservation of those who succeed us in the right way of the Lord." (Lon. Y. M. Epistle, 1712.)

In 1682, a considerable number of Friends arrived in America, and founded the colony of which Philadelphia was the centre. The first mention of schools was at a meeting of a council in Philadelphia, held 18th of Tenth month, 1683, at which time, it is easy to imagine, the settlers were not all comfortably housed. The following is the minute :

"The Governor (William Penn) and council, having taken into their serious consideration the necessity there is for the instruction and sober education of youth in the town of Philadelphia, sent for Enoch Flower, an inhabitant of said town, who, for twenty years past, hath been exercised in that care and employment in England, to whom having communicated their minds, he embraced it upon the following terms :

"To learn to read English,	. . .	4s. by the quarter.
" " " " and write	. . .	6s. " "
" " " " " " and cast
accounts	. . . . .	8s. " "

"For boarding a scholar, that is to say, diet, washing, lodging, and schooling, £10 for one whole year."

Six years later, the "Friends' Public School," in Philadelphia, was opened. This was regularly incorporated by Deputy-Governor Markham in 1697; and afterward confirmed by fresh patent from William Penn himself, the final one bearing date Eleventh month

29th, 1711. The objects of the corporation are thus stated :

"Whereas, The prosperity and welfare of any people depend in great measure upon the good education of youth and their early introduction into the principles of true religion and virtue, and qualifying them to serve their country and themselves, by breeding them in reading, writing, and learning of languages, and useful arts and science, suitable to their age, sex, and degree, which cannot be effected in any manner so well as by erecting public schools for the purposes aforesaid," &c.

George Keith, formerly of Aberdeen, in Scotland, was employed as teacher. He was followed, at the end of a year, by his usher, Thomas Makin, who is described as having been a "good Latinist." Several schools have been maintained, and are still in operation, under the provisions of the original charter.

The following, from Smith's "History of Delaware County, Pa.," is of interest in this connection :

"Friends now (1692) began to give their attention to the subject of schools. At a monthly meeting, held at Darby the 7th of the Seventh month, it was agreed 'that Benjamin Clift is to teach scoole, Beging<sup>e</sup> y<sup>e</sup> 12th of y<sup>e</sup> 7th m<sup>o</sup>; and to continue one whole yeare, except 2 weekes.' The annual salary of this worthy teacher, as appears by an agreement for employing him another year, was but £12. He probably boarded with his employers." (Page 183.)

Thus early did the subject claim the attention of Friends in America ; nor were the efforts confined to a few localities. Schools were established in various places, and their improvement made a subject of special and frequent care, both by individuals and meetings

Difficulty was experienced in procuring suitable teachers, and, we may readily suppose, the schools, when established, were not always such as satisfied concerned parents. Philadelphia Yearly Meeting Minutes, in 1746, say :

“We desire you, in your several Monthly Meetings, to encourage and assist each other in the settlement and support of schools for the instruction of your children, at least to read and write, and some further useful learning to such whose circumstances will permit it; and that you observe as much as possible, to employ such masters and mistresses as are concerned, not only to instruct your children in their learning, but are likewise careful, in the wisdom of God, and a spirit of meekness, gradually to bring them to the knowledge of their duty to God and one with another; and, we doubt not, such endeavors will be blessed with success.”

The same body, a few years after, still further advised, that “The most likely means to induce ‘religious prudent persons’ to undertake the business of teaching, would be to provide a certain and stated income, for such persons, by the establishment of funds for the purpose. In 1777 the ‘consideration of the sorrowful complaint of deficiency in the religious care and education of the youth, brought up from Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting, was entered upon;’ and the minute, then made, states, that ‘a lively concern impressed our minds for the advancement of righteousness and the real benefit of the rising generation, both with respect to their pious education in Friends’ families and also their school education.’”

The subject rested with weight upon the minds of many, and the exercise of the meeting, at that time, resulted in the appointment of a committee of fourteen Friends, “to take the matter relating to the youth and their religious education and schooling particularly under their care, and give such advice and assistance therein, and respecting other deficiencies, as they in the wisdom of Truth may see expedient."

This committee deemed it right to issue an epistle upon the subject, and from their report the following is taken :

"It is the opinion of the committee that Friends having united with others in employing such persons for masters, who have not submitted to the operation of Truth, hath had a tendency to strengthen a disposition in our youth, to avoid the cross and unite with the spirit of the world, whereby many hurtful and corrupt things have gained ground amongst us."

After alluding to the concern manifested upon the same subject for many years previous, and the fact, that, "notwithstanding these pressing recommendations, little has been effectually done therein,"—after proposing that it should be again urged upon the attention of subordinate meetings,—they conclude :

"We, also, think it necessary that this weighty concern should, in future, become the continued care of the Quarterly Meetings by an annual query, that so the matter may rest on a solid foundation, and every possible encouragement and assistance may be afforded to Friends in the settlement of schools, procuring masters, &c., through the whole extent of the Yearly Meeting."

It was also recommended :

"First, That a lot of ground be provided in each monthly or preparative meeting, sufficient for a garden, orchard, grass for a cow, &c., and a suitable house erected thereon. Second, That funds be raised by contribution, bequests, &c., in each meeting; the interest of which to be applied either in aid of the tutor's salary, or lessening the expense of Friends in straitened circumstances, in the education of their children. Third, That a committee be appointed in each monthly or preparative meeting, to have the care of schools, and the funds for their support, and that no tutor be employed but with their consent."

Some years after (1783), upon receipt of reports from the Quarterly Meetings, the Minutes say :

"Though in divers places some care has been taken, school-houses built, and schools instituted under care of Monthly Meetings, importing a degree of promising progress ; yet respecting other parts, it is acknowledged that little improvement has been made, not much having been done toward establishing permanent funds for the regular and liberal support of schools, under well qualified, discreet, and religious instructors." *

* It should be borne in mind that the period to which these Minutes refer was one of great unsettlement, owing to the Revolutionary contest, and the political agitations growing out of it.

THE HISTORY OF WESTTOWN BOARDING SCHOOL.

CHAPTER I.

ABOUT the year 1790, the propriety of establishing a boarding school began to arrest attention. A tract put forth by Owen Biddle in this year, — rehearsing some facts in the experience of Friends in England, and discussing, at some length, the adaptation of a large boarding school to the needs of the youth of the Society in this country, — probably contributed to ripen the concern in the minds of many Friends. In the Fourth month, 1791, the subject was introduced into Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, whence it was carried to the Quarterly Meeting. That body, in the succeeding year, introduced the subject into the Yearly Meeting. Effort on the part of individuals had already resulted in the formation of a fund of several thousand pounds in aid of the enterprise when it should be undertaken.

A subject of the magnitude of that now brought before the Yearly Meeting, of course, required much consideration before action could be taken. It was successively referred to the meetings held in 1793 and 1794. In the latter meeting a large committee was appointed to take the whole subject into consideration,—consult with such Friends as had for a length of time had the matter weightily on their minds,—and report their united judgment when ready. At a subsequent sitting they made a report, from which the following is extracted :

“On taking the subject into deliberate consideration, we are united in the sentiment that an institution of the kind proposed, if managed with religious care and circumspection, may tend to the prosperity of Truth by promoting the real good of the rising generation ; we do, therefore, recommend the said proposal from the Quarterly Meeting of Philadelphia, to the patronage of the Yearly Meeting, and propose that a committee thereof be appointed to consider and digest a plan and rules for the government and management of the house, school, and other parts of the economy,” &c.

They proposed that the said committee should be the agents for carrying out the concern, and should report regularly their progress. The Meeting agreeing to this, a standing committee of forty-seven Friends was appointed, as recommended. The women’s Yearly Meeting appointed seven of their number to join with men Friends in the service as occasion might require.

The men Friends thus appointed held their first meeting for deliberation on the evening of the 3d of Tenth month, 1794, in the old Fourth Street Meeting-House.* Thomas Morris was chosen clerk, and Thomas

Fisher, treasurer. A sub-committee was appointed to solicit further subscriptions. The selection of a site for the proposed institution was one of the first subjects to be decided. Some of the members, whose attention had already been turned to this, proposed a tract of land on the Neshamony Creek, some miles below Bristol, in Bucks County, containing about four hundred and fifty acres, known as Langhorne Park. This land was indeed purchased by a few Friends in the expectation that it would be selected for the purpose. A delegation was sent to view this spot, as well as any others, thought more likely to answer the end designed. After visiting various places, they expressed themselves in favor of selecting the farm of James Gibbons in Westtown township, Chester County, as the one in all respects best adapted to the purpose. This land, about six hundred acres in extent, was accordingly purchased. The amount paid James Gibbons was £6,083 6s. 8d. = $16,222.22. A small sum was expended to obtain the entire water-power of Chester Creek. This was accomplished by buying the adjoining farm on the west side, and selling with a reservation of the entire water privilege. At the time of purchase only a small portion of the farm had been cleared; not only that which is timbered at the present day, but much of that which has since been brought under cultivation, was then covered by a dense growth of forest-trees, of a size and age now represented by a few trees in the "South woods." Near the present site of the farm-house stood the dwelling known in those days as the "Mansion house." This was repaired and soon after occupied. Edward Churchman was the first tenant. Preparations were at once made for erecting a saw-mill. This was completed by the end of the year 1795, and afforded the means of preparing the lumber to be used in the future buildings. This mill and dam in the creek were near the northern line of the farm, and the curious may yet see the remains of the latter, and the race which wound around the western base of Walnut Hill, to the spot where the mill was situated.

Meanwhile the selection of a site for the main building occupied the attention of the committee. By agreement, several members met at the farm on the 17th of the Eighth month, 1795. Their report says, they "viewed the eminence north of the Mansion house remarkable for the fine prospect it affords." Judging this to be the right place, the exact front was staked out. It was the original design to make the main front parallel "to the new road from Marlborough Street road to the Goshen township road." But a south-eastern front was afterward decided upon. In the following spring a barn was built near the farm-house; and arrangements were made for the burning of bricks for the school-building, — a plentiful supply of clay for which, as well as of good building-stone, exists on the farm.

The plan of the building was a subject requiring careful consideration; and it was only after much labor had been expended that one was agreed upon. The generally prevailing opinion was, that accommodations should be provided for one hundred and fifty students and the requisite number of teachers, &c. For this a building, one hundred feet long and fifty-six wide, three stories in height, was thought to be sufficient. Special care was taken that an extension could be readily made, if circumstances should render it desirable in after-years. The sub-committee intrusted with the oversight of the work of building were David Evans, Jonathan Evans, Thomas Morris, Philip Price, Jr., Daniel Thomas, Samuel Canby, James Marshall, John Talbot, Eli Yarnall, and Abram Sharpless. The work progressed steadily from the time of its beginning in 1796 to the period of its completion in 1799. If it should occur to any that the time thus occupied was long, it must be remembered that builders had not, then, all the modern facilities at their command, and material was not to be had in a complete state of preparation at short notice. Those of the committee, who resided in or near Philadelphia, had a carriage, or horse-back ride, of twenty miles, in order to get to the scene of their labors. The expenditure of time on their part must therefore have been considerable.

The building thus slowly constructed has proved to be of a very substantial character, and although the floors in some places, and other parts of the wood-work, have, in the many years that have since elapsed, required renewal, yet the walls still bear witness to the care which was exercised in the selection of the materials and the thoroughness of the work.

During the erection of the building, roads were laid out, a garden was enclosed, furniture obtained for the school-rooms, and other preparations made for the accommodation of its future inmates.

The total expense of the improvements thus made, including a new barn at the farm-house, general repairs, fencing, &c., increased the total cost of the premises by the year 1802 to $46,020.19. An inspection of the books of the Institution shows that the total amount expended up to the year 1870, in the further enlargements of the main building, the erection of additional structures, alterations, repairs, and permanent improvements generally, to the buildings and upon the farm, forms an aggregate of $228,335.36.

In the Yearly Meeting which convened near the close of 9th mo., 1796, report was made of the transactions up to that period; in the progress of the building, the condition of the farm, and the exhausted state of the funds. Some "constitutional rules," also, were presented at the same time, describing several of the main features in the organization of the proposed establishment. The first of these defined the nature and powers of the standing committee to have the permanent care of the school. Others made provision for a superintendent under the direction of the acting committee, for meetings for worship in the house on First and Fifth days, for the support of discipline by the officers, aided, when needful, by the acting committee, &c. Some of these "rules" were as follows:

"That spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic, and book-keeping, shall be taught in the different schools, and such other useful branches of learning as the circumstances of the pupils may require, and the state of the Institution shall permit."

"That the board and lodging of the children shall be plain and frugal, without distinction, except in cases of sickness."

"That boys and girls be accommodated in separate apartments under care of separate tutors."

"That no tutors, assistants, or domestics, be retained in the Institution, whose deportment is not sober and exemplary."

"That no children shall be taken in under the age of eight years, or entered for less than one year."

"That if children are sent with clothing not sufficiently plain as to color, or which shall require washing, it shall be returned; but if the make only be exceptionable, it shall be altered and the expense charged."

The meeting also took measures to replenish the funds, and strengthen the hands of the committee. As the house progressed toward completion, other details began to receive attention. Efforts were made to engage teachers, though with only partial success at first, and especial difficulty was found in procuring men Friends who were qualified for the service. A report in 1799 says:

“Encouragement hath, however, been derived from the free and disinterested offer of our Friends, Richard and Catharine Hartshorne, to devote their time and attention to the oversight of the general order and management of the house and its appendages.”

These Friends, who were the first superintendents, entered on their duties in the early part of the year 1799. Women Friends interested themselves to good purpose in procuring beds, bedding, and many other articles requisite in housekeeping. The books, opened for the purpose, contained in 4th mo., 1799, the names of seventy-three boys and sixty girls, applicants for admission; but, from the difficulty of starting at once into successful operation with a full house, it was concluded to begin with a much smaller number, and to admit at first only twenty of each sex. This number was to be increased by ten of each sex monthly, if it was found to be advisable. The price of board and tuition was fixed at £24 per annum = $64; it being decided to put it at this low price, in order that the charge should not be an obstacle “in depriving any proper objects of the benefit intended.”

The school was opened on the 6th of 5th mo., 1799, with John Forsythe, Elizabeth Bellerby, and Phebe Cox as teachers. Some members of the committee were also present, as appears by the following extract from the Minutes:

“Our Friends, Samuel Smith and John Cox, being willing to devote a portion of their time for this purpose, their dedication to the service is very acceptable to the committee, and they are encouraged to attend as soon after the school shall be opened as is convenient to them. Rebecca Archer, having agreed to attend, and it being hoped that Rebecca Jones and Ann Lloyd may also find it their duty to give up to unite with the two men Friends above mentioned.”

It would be interesting to know more of those eventful days, the 6th and 7th of the month, when most of the forty pupils were arriving and finding places in the new institution. Busy days they doubtless were, as it is scarcely possible but that even the most careful foresight had failed to secure every needed arrangement, and many times the officers found themselves poorly provided with facilities for their work. A glance at the list of students will show who the first admissions were. One of them, William Evans, late of Philadelphia, makes the following mention of his early experiences at the school. (See Journal of William Evans, p. 8.)

“In the Fifth month, 1799, the boarding school at Westtown, instituted by our Yearly Meeting, was open for the reception of scholars, and I was one of the first twenty admitted there, my brother Joseph also remaining a few months. It was quite a novel scene, and required time before a proper system of order and government was established. Everything seemed in a crude state; the yards not laid out and regulated, shavings and chips from the hewed timber and the shingles, the woods grown up very thick with bushes, so that it was difficult to get through them, all contributed to give the whole a rude appearance. All this made work and amusement for the boys, who employed themselves under the supervision of the teachers in burning up the great beds of shavings, cutting openings for walks through the woods, and making arbors with seats to recreate themselves in during the warm weather."

According to the arrangement made, additional pupils were afterwards admitted, until the number was considerably above the estimated capacity of the house, being as many as one hundred of each sex at the beginning of winter. At this time there were about one hundred applications on file, and it was ordered that no more names should be registered. To meet the requirements of the growing family, other teachers were added during the summer. Ann Thomas came in the 7th mo., Elihu Pickering in the 8th mo., Ann Bacon in the 10th mo., and Enoch Lewis in the 11th mo. of 1799. The progress up to this time must have been very gratifying to those who had labored in the cause. If they foresaw in the future of the establishment a long career of usefulness, it surely was not more than they reasonably had ground to hope.

After a period of seventy-two years, it is difficult to obtain an insight into the daily life of the inmates of the house. At first the galleries were used as collecting-rooms, and the children stood during the periods in which they were there assembled. Rooms on the first floor were afterwards used for this purpose, which were furnished with benches without backs, on which the pupils sat closely side by side, without desks. Dining-rooms were in the basement, as also the laundry. The tables were doubtless furnished in a simple manner. There are those who still remember the large drinking-cups which used to be passed up and down the long bare tables to accommodate all who were thirsty, one or two sufficing for all. There were no wash-rooms, but the pumps in the yard furnished water, to which the children carried their basins and took turns before the spout, and where morning ablutions in winter were probably quickly performed. One pump was in the space where the boys' bath-house now stands; another in the same relative situation at the opposite end of the house. No pupils entered this school for a less time than one year, and two months' notice was required before a child was removed. When a vacancy occurred, the next applicant on the list was admitted to fill it. There were no vacations. Children when entered were expected to remain until they had completed their studies. Being thus debarred from the opportunity of going home, the services of the tailor and shoemaker were often needed, who resided in the house, and kept their accounts with each scholar.*

Teachers, if they had any vacation, were released one at a time. The salaries during the first year were as follows: Male teachers, £100 = $266, and if married, a house to live in beside; female teachers, £30 = $80.

* As illustrating this, observe the following; being the sundries charged to one of the first twenty boys:

As indicated in the "Constitutional Rules," the education proposed was practical in its nature. Much attention was given to spelling, reading, and writing. If visitors came into the school, a reading class was called out for their entertainment. In the First-day afternoon reading of religious books before the whole school, the older pupils assisted by turns. With the girls especially it was a favorite custom to meet and transact business after the manner of their elders in society affairs; quaint and often beautifully expressed were the "certificates" prepared for those about leaving the school. The letters written home were produced first as essays and, after being corrected by the teachers, were copied with strictest regard to neatness. When complete, they were placed in the rack in the parlor to await the coming of visitors who could forward them to their respective neighborhoods.

Very early in the progress of the institution there were on each side of the house two principal rooms, promotion to which was determined largely by mathematical attainments, and from which classes were drawn for exercise in other things. There were two long sessions per day, and during the winter season an evening school, and in the summer an hour of recitation before breakfast.

The care of the pupils between schools devolved upon the teachers in rotation. This duty was arduous; and the difficulties were probably increased by the changes of caretakers which this system implied. It was inevitable that, however conscientious all might be, the children realized the change from one to another; and, since upon the teacher in "care" devolved many of those minor duties so essential to the welfare of a large company of young persons, we are not surprised that many of the trying experiences of the teachers in early times were connected with this portion of their duties, nor that in after years it was found expedient to secure uniformity in the exercise of this care by the employment of persons specially for the service.

The female department had some features peculiar to itself. There appears to have been at first a monitorial system, not unlike that yet found in some schools for deaf mutes and the blind. Each older pupil had under her immediate care one of the little girls. The responsibility of the older for the younger pupil extended to such details as the neatness of the toilet and politeness and deportment at all times; and any punishment merited by the child was endured by the caretaker. A compensating feature was the privilege of changing in case any child was not readily controlled.

The name monitor was not used in this sense, however; but that distinguishing title was applied to some older girls who performed more important duties in aid of the teachers, having charge of rooms at times and reporting the names of those who were disorderly. This was regarded as a very responsible office, and those who held it were allowed to sit up in the evenings until a later hour, or sometimes to eat at the family table as a reward.

All of the girls over fourteen years of age wore caps, and a degree of skill in making and caring for these was regarded as essential to the future housewife. Indeed, the education offered the girls was even more "practical" than that provided for the boys, for we find a "sewing-room" to have been an established feature of the school. This was under the care of a responsible person, and the instruction was regular and systematic. Attention was given to plain sewing, to mending in all its branches, and to such forms of fancy work as seemed to possess an element of usefulness and led to familiarity with the use of the needle. Knitting was taught; and in darning, "a patch eight by twelve inches" was reckoned a sufficient test of the skill of the operator. At one time we find that all the younger girls spent two weeks at a time in the sewing-room, going out at intervals during the day for lessons in spelling and reading. Four weeks were then spent in the "arithmetical room," followed again by two weeks at sewing. How important this department was considered we may judge from the proportion of time devoted to it, and the many items charged to the pupils upon the books of the institution, such as thread, ribbon, vandyke, zephyr, galloon, etc. Boys were sometimes employed in the gardens and in some minor operations about the premises, but there does not appear to have been any attempt at systematic instruction in manual labor.

Human nature is much the same in all ages. The officers of the institution in these earlier years were patient, conscientious workers, who, no doubt, endeavored to impress upon their pupils the propriety of doing right for its own sake. But offences came and punishments were necessary. For the boys, the use of the rod was well-nigh universal, Westtown being in this respect not unlike other schools of the period. Those who transgressed by going "out of bounds" were punished also by deprivation of their customary privileges. There was a rule, often changed and apparently not satisfactory in its operation, which excluded boys from the school after they attained a certain age, generally fourteen or fifteen years.

Milder punishments sufficed for the girls. A "disgrace-table" in the dining-room, a "dunce-stool" near the teacher's desk, and the regular practice of requiring so much "poetry" for each trifling offence, were the instruments of punishment. The production of rhyme—poetry it was called—seems to have been almost as common as whipping among the boys. These effusions of course perished with the using, but there must have been strong temptation to dwell upon the personal peculiarities of their careful teachers, and to versify in sport concerning the offences for which the punishment was exacted.

A hard-worked and hard-working body of people were the caretakers of the institution, and obliged to submit to much real hardship in the discharge of their duties. From the busy superintendent, everybody's friend and universal helper in time of trouble, charged with the care of all duties which did not plainly belong to others, even to extracting the teeth of the children on occasion, to the equally busy teacher armed, it may be, with a penknife and a bundle of quills for making pens, or leading the procession of children toward the chamber, preceded by half a dozen older pupils bearing tallow dips, all found themselves busied with many cares, and often obliged to work with but very imperfect appliances and poor accommodations. As late as 1807, probably later, there was not a carpet about the establishment, almost no maps, and all the furniture was of the simplest kind. The food supplied was simple and generally nutritious. Pie and milk, which was the regular supper three times per week, was much enjoyed, and Westtown pie is still remembered with pleasure by pupils of former times. The pies were served on large pewter plates some sixteen or eighteen inches in diameter, and the milk drunk from "porringers" of the same material. This pewter ware was gradually replaced by more modern kinds, and finally became almost a curiosity. The porringers were made at the school and remolded as they became worn.

Persons visiting the school were, as now, accommodated at the farm-house. The committee were desirous that this latter "should not be viewed as a tavern, where arbitrary conduct in calling for meals, commanding the servants, etc., is often observed, but that, as much as possible, a Christian and meek deportment be maintained; that the table be provided with victuals, plain cooked, and served in a decent way, merely for needful accommodation, avoiding all profusion and unnecessary expense."

Richard and Catharine Hartshorne, believing they felt released from further care at the school, retired about the close of the year 1799. Some members of the committee assisted in the oversight of the family until 4th mo., 1800, when Joshua and Ann Sharpless assumed the charge as superintendents. The experience of a year now began to make manifest the further wants of the establishment. Women Friends, having observed the inconveniences to which the sick were exposed in the apartments allotted for their use, proposed, and were encouraged to raise a sum of money principally among themselves, and erect an infirmary, in which such cases might be treated, at a suitable distance from the main building. With funds principally procured by private contributions, a building was erected on the south side of the lane, in the summer of 1803. Rooms in the basement were appropriated to the tailor and shoemaker of the institution, leaving the upper portions of the main building to be devoted to the family proper. This infirmary was never used to any considerable extent as originally designed. The expense and difficulty of supporting two separate nurseries at a distance from the remainder of the family were sufficient to prevent the house from being thus used. It has, however, been occupied as a residence for married teachers, by whom members of the committee were temporarily accommodated when in attendance at the school.

About this period, another improvement was projected and carried out. Difficulty having been experienced in getting the wheat converted into flour for so large a family, twelve Friends formed a company in 11th mo., 1800, and put up a grist-mill, with the requisite dam and race for securing power from the water of Chester Creek, taking the usual toll from all grain ground. The mill eventually passed into the ownership of the school, some shares being donated and some purchased, and has been in successful operation since. In 1815, a pump was attached to the wheel to force water up for the supply of the school.

While the institution was thus acquiring valuable additions, it was not exempt from sore trials. In the spring of 1801, as also in the autumn of 1803, sickness* prevailed to such an extent that parents were allowed to remove the children for a short time. The number in attendance was so far reduced that for the year ending 4th mo., 1803, only one hundred and thirty pupils were reported. It was a period of some discouragement to the friends of the institution, in alluding to which, the committee say :

“As many engagements, however clearly directed in their origin, and in early progress attended with confirming evidence of their rectitude, are subject to the introduction of discouraging prospects and consequently close exercises, so in the prosecution of this religious concern, the minds of the committee have not been without a share of trials of this kind.”

*Scarlet fever.

A few months later :

“The minds of Friends were turned to the general state of the school, so far as relates to morals, manners, and religious education of the youth; and it being apprehended there is ground to fear that the improvement of the rising generation, so much desired, and for which this institution, as one means, was originally designed to promote, is not advancing in such a degree as to afford a satisfactory prospect to many concerned minds, it is hoped the importance of this deeply interesting subject may claim the weighty consideration of Friends generally; and that we of the committee, to whom the concern of the Yearly Meeting has been more particularly intrusted, may solidly ponder and carefully examine how far our duty has been performed, that should a greater portion of our time, and more earnest exertion of endeavors be pointed out to individuals, it is desired that a faithful dedication of talents in a cause of such importance may be rendered, under a hope that so benevolent a work will be rewarded with the comfortable enjoyment of true peace.”

One source of discouragement, during the years 1802-3-4, was the weak force of men teachers, and the difficulty of obtaining others. Assistant teachers, then called “apprentices,” were now first proposed, as a means of lightening the labors of the principal teachers, and also as likely to lead more persons to qualify themselves for the profession of teaching. It was also hoped “that any members of the standing committee having a concern to give up a portion of their time to be spent at the school for the furtherance of good order and decorum amongst the children there, be encouraged to offer themselves to the acting committee for this end.” Thomas Scattergood at one time remained in the school for some months, aiding in the labor of instruction, as well as by his advice and religious exercise.

The following extracts from the minutes and reports of the committee further show the religious concern which was maintained :

9th mo., 1805: "In the evening a season of solemn religious waiting with the scholars, teachers, and various care-takers was experienced, in which the minds of some of the committee were qualified by Divine Goodness to communicate pertinent counsel, calculated to encourage the superintendent and teachers in the performance of their arduous duties, and the children to submit themselves to wholesome discipline."

3d mo., 1807: "We can inform the meeting that an improvement in salutary order and discipline has been pleasingly observable, and an encouraging hope revives, that as the exercise which led into this undertaking for the advancement of the youth in piety and virtue is singly kept to, the propitious eye of Divine regard will support under the various difficulties and trials with which this and other works of righteousness are frequently assailed."

CHAPTER II.

IN external appearance the Westtown of 1810 differed largely from that of a later day. The building still retained the steep roof which figures in all early drawings and representations. On the east the woods came close to the house, furnishing natural shade. In front and on the west some trees had been planted, but were yet small.

There was a yard of limited extent in front, and beyond a garden for vegetables and sometimes flowers. Farther over the brow of the hill the road wound around toward the east end of the house, passing near the barn, which stood nearly on the spot afterward occupied by the greenhouse. Below the road there was at first continuous woods, but early in the century an opening was made, thus securing a fine view and permitting the circulation of air.

A small yard, extend'ng a few rods from the western end of the house, was set apart for the exclusive use of the girls. Beyond this was the regular vegetable garden of the institution, occupying the space afterward called the "girls' bounds." The pupils always had some use of this ground, however, for they might enter at a gate opposite the west door, and a walk quite around the garden, with two transverse walks, gave opportunity for exercise. "Three times around once across" was said to make a mile. Both this garden and the one in front were carefully fenced.

The boys had little open playground, but the dense woods presented unlimited scope for amusement of certain kinds. In this they built their huts, and at seasons stored their supply of nuts. The open space north of the lane was an apple orchard. The trees which now occupy each side of the lane were not planted until twenty years later.

It is not essential to this sketch to record all the changes which occurred in the building itself. Partitions were erected or removed, and rooms devoted to different purposes, with the varying demands of the school. The erection of buildings partially or wholly detached from the principal structure liberated various portions, which were appropriated to the better accommodation of the inmates. A slight mention only of some of the more important additions will be attempted. In the year 1809 a slight fire in one of the rooms warned the inmates of the danger which threatened them, and led to the employment of a watchman to patrol the house, and to the procuring of a supply of fire-buckets.

The boys' play-shed was erected the same year. About the year 1811, the want of additional room, especially for the boys, began to be felt. A subscription was set on foot, with the design of raising a sum sufficient to extend the main building East and West a distance of thirty feet. The East, or boys' wing, was ready for use in 1813. The basement was used at first for storing wood, afterward as a wash-room. The first floor was divided into two school-rooms; and the second floor eventually became the room for the meetings for worship of the family. The erection of the western wing was delayed some years for want of funds. The small tenement opposite the end of the lane came into the possession of the school in 1811. It being feared that this property would be used for purposes injurious to the interests of the students, the stone building now there, and a few acres of land attached, were purchased by the committee, and it has since been the residence of some of the married teachers, or others connected with the school.

During a period of several subsequent years, little change was made in the surroundings of the institution. Internally, however, it was gradually undergoing transformations to adapt it more fully to the end designed. Efforts were made to secure the more complete classification of the scholars, as well as to procure better text-books for their use. The range of studies was gradually enlarged in conformity with the general improvements in education. The desire of some scholars to pursue the study of the Latin and Greek languages, led to the employment of a regular classical teacher in 1830.

The following extract from a report of the committee in 1824, gives a pleasing view of the results obtained up to this period in one very important direction :

“Among the many advantages which it was contemplated would accrue from an institution of this description, several of both sexes have so profited by the course of studies and the mode of instruction thus derived as to be qualified for teachers of schools in many parts of the country; and so far as can at present be ascertained, the number who have thus devoted a part of their time and talents is at least sixty-nine young men and one hundred and eighty-one young women, the ability and example of many of whom, we trust, have diffused such views of the economy and management of schools, as have tended to raise in due estimation this important and highly useful occupation.”

Up to this period, the number of children admitted had been 3,482, viz., 1,337 boys, and 2,145 girls.

The troubles of 1827-8, growing out of a defection in principle among members of the Society of Friends, were felt at Westtown, as elsewhere, very severely. A spirit of insubordination showed itself among the boys, which was a source of great anxiety and care to the officers and committee, as also to many parents. Careful and persevering labor on the part of those immediately concerned, was eventually followed by a more satisfactory state of things among the students. It was found necessary to remove a few from the school, and with a view to promote order among those remaining, some members of the committee spent a portion of their time at the institution.

The following extract from a report of the committee shows the feelings experienced at this depressing and critical period by deeply exercised Friends, who were then charged with the oversight of the institution. After stating some particulars connected with the recent disorder, they remark :

“ Discouraging as this representation may appear, we have a hope that by patient, persevering labor, under the guidance of Divine Wisdom, who has, we believe, in great condescension regarded this seminary as an effort towards the promotion of righteousness and truth in the earth, a much better and more comfortable state may be effected, and many of the children, as heretofore, have, with grateful hearts, to acknowledge the benefits and solid advantages derived to them by being placed under the concern and guardianship of the Yearly Meeting.”

After the separation of 1827, it was found that Westtown School was even more indispensable than before to the Society. Friends in many sections of the country were left few in number, and so scattered in location that it was difficult to support the requisite neighborhood schools of a select character.

The difficulties of such Friends claimed the serious attention of the Yearly Meeting in 1830, and many looked to Westtown as being the best means for remedying the evils likely to result from the crippled condition of the schools. It was finally decided to reduce the charge from $80 to $60 per year, in order that pecuniary considerations should not deter any from deriving such advantages as the school afforded. Such a low charge, it was foreseen, would be attended with a deficiency in the funds of the school, and it was recommended that such deficit should be made up by the meeting at large.*

* As expected, a deficiency in the funds resulted from the reduction in the amount charged. During the period from 1830 to 1836, it was calculated that each student only paid about four-fifths of the actual expense incurred on his account. The amount undercharged

For some years following, the school was in a very crowded condition. This made some addition to the building necessary. The long-delayed west wing was erected and brought into use in 1833. The increased labors of the instructors, from the additional number of students, and from the more comprehensive course of instruction required, led to the employment, in 1831, of persons whose special business it was to have charge over the pupils in the intervals of school. Davis Reece was the first governor and Hannah Wood the first governess. Their appointment was an experiment, which, proving satisfactory, has been continued.

In 1832-3, the cholera raged in and around Philadelphia with violence. A report of the committee to the Yearly Meeting in 1833, makes the following mention of it:

“In alluding to the occurrences of the past year, the committee feel it to be cause of gratitude to the Preserver of men that the institution has escaped the epidemic which has so extensively prevailed throughout our country. Although much may be attributed to the healthfulness of the situation, and the salutary regulations exercised over the scholars, yet we cannot but acknowledge the exemption as an evidence of the preserving care of that beneficent Providence to whom we owe all our blessings. Several cases of the cholera having occurred in the vicinity of the school, and the rapid course of the disease rendering prompt medical advice necessary, the committee deemed it expedient to employ a physician to reside for a time on the farm, and also to engage experienced nurses to attend at the institution during this time was over eighteen thousand dollars; this, with the expense of erecting the west wing, and other permanent improvements, at a cost of about eight thousand dollars, made it necessary for the Yearly Meeting to raise a considerable amount to cancel the remaining indebtedness.

should their services be required. The expense of these arrangements, we believe, was more than compensated by their influence in allaying the anxiety of parents and calming the agitation and fears which had been excited in the minds of some of the scholars."

In 1836, the committee brought before the Yearly Meeting a proposal for dividing the year into terms, with two short vacations. An experience of thirty-seven years had shown that the system of having no stated intervals of rest was attended with serious disadvantages. It was also found that the requirements of the modern mode of instruction could not be so perfectly secured as now desired without a more complete classification than was possible when students were allowed to begin or discontinue their attendance at irregular intervals. The needful relaxation to the teachers, and a better opportunity for making repairs to the property, thus afforded, were also among the reasons for recommending such a change. The proposition was adopted in the following year, and stated terms, with vacations of three weeks, which were afterwards increased to four weeks each, in the spring and autumn, were established — that in the spring including the time of the Yearly Meeting. This change proved a very satisfactory one, and it is probable that in a majority of cases as much has been accomplished in the two terms of forty-four weeks by the scholars as formerly in the fifty-two.

About this time the two collecting-rooms assumed their present form and appearance, by the removal of partitions and the addition of new desks.

The old tin-plate stove, which once graced the centre of the girls' collecting room, had given place to stoves of more improved pattern. Blackboards of small size began to appear in the school-rooms about 1836, and in many details both the building, as regards the use of the various apartments, and the school, in its system of education, began to assume more nearly the character presented in recent times.

The appointment of a governor in 1831 was followed in 1834 by the addition of a teacher on the boys' side for the instruction of classes in Latin and Greek. The rule which terminated the residence of boys at the school on their attaining a certain age had been rescinded, and the number of studies which might be pursued was rapidly increased. Higher mathematics became very popular, and this tendency in the school was probably promoted by the presence at different times of some teachers eminently qualified by character and attainments for inspiring an interest in this department. Mention of the names of Enoch Lewis, Joseph G. Harlan, and others scarcely less known, will readily suggest a partial explanation for what seemed in after years a distinctive feature of Westtown.

On the girls' side of the house the sewing-room became a less important department. Either from natural inclination, or as an incidental result of instruction in this art, needlework was for many years the principal amusement, it might seem, of many students. Samplers, pin-cushions, mottoes, even globes to illustrate the geography of the world, were favorite articles of production, and these were wrought with so much care as to make them heir-looms in many of the families then represented at the school. But as school studies increased in variety the sewing-room lost some of its attraction. First the instruction was limited to small girls, then became voluntary, and finally, about the year 1845, was discontinued. The one relic of the sewing-room, which continued for yet another generation, was a "drawer" in one of the school-rooms, stocked as before with little articles likely to be required by the girls in their fancy work. This, too, passed away in quite recent times, and the governess instead made occasional visits to West Chester, charged with numerous small errands.

Few summer visitors at Westtown in the period under review failed to see the boys' gardens. Just east of the boys' woods, and flanking the old orchard, a strip of ground two or three rods in width was fenced off and divided into small lots. These the boys cultivated, and great was the rivalry as to which company could show the prettiest flowers and neatest arrangement of walks, seats, and arbors. Persons yet living testify that much taste was manifested in the care and cultivation of these miniature gardens, and no small amount of enjoyment received therefrom. Why they were afterward neglected is not explained. As late as 1870 the outline of beds and walks was plainly visible in the sod where the gardens had been, and some hardy flowers, surviving the changed treatment, have become naturalized in the neighboring woods. As the orchard decayed the boys acquired a footing there for games of ball, and finally, in 1865, the game of base-ball having previously been introduced, their playground was extended to its present size. The last of the apple trees was removed in 1868. The traditions of the boys' gardens still cling to the spot, and there are those who lament the decay of the old custom.

A play-shed for the girls, about thirty by ninety feet in size, erected in 1840, gave opportunity for exercise under cover, and was a useful addition to their rather meager accommodations. In 1846-7 a new roof was put on the main building, and at the same time the side walls were raised about four feet, thus giving the whole a more modern appearance than formerly. The change materially added to the comfort of the boys in their sleeping-apartment, and made it possible to secure better ventilation. At this time also the problem of providing apartments for the occasional invalids attained a satisfactory solution. A benevolent Friend * having offered to defray most of the expense, two nurseries were erected, each twenty by thirty-two feet, two stories high. At first they were connected with the galleries by narrow passage-ways, but afterward they were extended so as to reach the galleries, thus still further increasing their size. Few of the additions to the original structures have been more useful than these buildings. They were found to be well adapted to the end designed. The rooms vacated in the central building were appropriated in other ways.

The bath-house for the girls was completed about the beginning of 1850. The next year witnessed the removal of the laundry from the basement to the building specially designed for it. Both these improvements contributed to the health and comfort of the family. The buildings at the farm were undergoing extensive modifications at the same time. The farm-house itself was pronounced inadequate to the wants of the place, and was much out of repair. The barn was in like condition. The Yearly Meeting in 1849 authorized the collection of funds for the erection of new buildings to replace them, and $10,000 was soon obtained. Including the wood-house, the introduction of water, and various other improvements in and around the house (made chiefly in 1851), the cost of the farm-house was $8,474.98, and it was occupied in the early part of 1851. The remainder of the funds, with some additions, was used in erecting the proposed barn in the summer of 1853, the cost of which was $3,953. Both these buildings are large and well arranged, and have added much to the comfort of those concerned, as well as promoted the economy of the farm management.

The danger and inconvenience resulting from the use of lamps in the school building were removed, in 1854, by the erection of apparatus for the manufacture of gas, the expenses of which, as of several previous improvements, were defrayed by private individuals. The present wheel-house on the race bank, some distance above the grist-mill, was erected about this time, and the forcing-pump, which had previously been at the grist-mill, was removed to it, and a new forcing-main, consisting of fourteen hundred feet of three-inch cast-iron pipe, was laid from the wheel-house to the school. The girls' piazza was built in 1855. The boys' bath-house was completed in the same year, and both this and the girls' furnished with apparatus for heating the water. No one will question the sanitary value of these arrangements. In the years 1855-6-7, upwards of $11,000 were expended in painting and repairing the school building throughout, repairing and putting new roofs on the houses in the lane, and in making various repairs and additions to the buildings at the school, the farm-house, and the mill, among which may be particularly mentioned the new barn and carriage-house at the school. This latter was a great improvement over the old school barn, which stood nearly on the site of the present greenhouse. Of the $11,000 thus expended, $9,800 were contributed by two interested members of the committee.

In the autumn of 1858 the West Chester and Philadelphia Railroad was completed, and Street Road Station, distant one and a half miles, became the point of arrival and departure for those connected with the institution. Travel to and from the place was thus rendered much easier. At the opening, and for more than fifty years thereafter, all travel was on horseback or in carriages. While the school was without vacations, and the pupils were coming and going nearly all the time, it was seldom that many needed conveyances at any one time. Effort was made to keep up a regular stage line from Philadelphia, but it was attended with much trouble from insufficient patronage. But when the session system was introduced, and the children met in Philadelphia, and came out in stage loads, the twenty mile ride became quite an important event in the career of the Westtown scholar. The trip back to the city was a renewal of the excitement and bustle. After the branch road was built from the Pennsylvania Central to West Chester, some of the travel took that course. In 1852 the stage route was changed to meet passengers in West Chester, and so remained until the final change above mentioned diverted all travel to the new road.

The period during which the Civil War raged in this country, was not characterized by any serious depression in the operations of the school. Indeed, as an asylum for many young persons, where they were measurably free from the great excitement prevailing elsewhere, its usefulness seemed even greater.

Several pupils from those portions of the Southern States devastated by the contending armies, spent the time quietly and profitably at the school, until they could safely return home.

CHAPTER III.

IT may be desirable to describe more fully the workings of the school as exhibited in the decade from 1860 to 1870, before any accommodations were provided outside the main building. Except such modifications as resulted from the employment of additional teachers little change had taken place since 1830. There were now six men and five women teachers, and a governor and governess. On each side of the house there was a primary department, including, usually, about one-fifth of all the pupils, but with no definite standard requisite for promotion. These rooms were entirely separate from the others in their routine work. The remaining portion of the school was divided into equal parts, under the care of the first and second mathematical teachers respectively. From the rooms presided over by these teachers, the pupils went out in classes for instruction in reading and writing, and the boys for Latin and Greek. No regular provision was yet made for instructing the girls in the classics. The evening school in winter and the morning hour in summer, now the first hour after breakfast, was devoted, usually, to grammar, each teacher having a class. At another time in the day the whole school was divided into spelling classes and sent to the different rooms.

In mathematics, no attempt was made to instruct by classes. Each pupil did much or little, as suited him, and, reporting from day to day at the teacher's desk, was usually examined at the board to test his proficiency, then allowed to proceed. Those who were fond of mathematics made rapid progress, while others advanced very slowly. So unequal was the development that no regular classification was attempted. New scholars entering the school were not examined closely, but allowed to choose their own studies to a great extent, unless they undertook something manifestly beyond their powers.

Just previous to the visitation by the General Committee in the Sixth and Twelfth months, there was a week of review and a day of oral examination on the work accomplished in the first portion of the term. A longer review and a three days' examination marked the end of the term.

Upon the pages of the catalogue appeared the courses of study, classical and scientific, but they were rather formidable, and it was not the custom of the school to take up these branches in the prescribed order and finish them. Many remained in the school almost or quite long enough to finish, but having passed no examinations on the earlier parts of the work they were deterred from seeking a diploma before leaving. Thus, the courses of study were not much used. The few who did graduate (seven boys and seventeen girls previous to 1870) can scarcely be said to have much influenced the school at large in favor of a systematic course of study.

Dining-rooms were three in number, the superintendent's and those teachers not immediately engaged in the care of the pupils, occupying what was known as the "family dining-room." The experiment made many years before, of having the boys and girls in the same room, but at different tables, had been thought unsatisfactory. The furniture of these rooms was the same which had been in use for half a century, except the pewter porringers and plates had pretty much disappeared, and the long tables were covered with cloths. At the head of each table a short bench was placed, on which a teacher sat. At the teacher's side were two scholars, chosen by turn from the table, whose business it was to replenish the dishes from the kitchen and act in general as waiters. About thirty persons were seated at each table. The provision, except bread, was kept at the head of the table, and plates were helped, under the immediate supervision of the teacher, by some older pupils designated for the purpose. Meals were eaten in silence, or nearly so, except the subdued calls upon the waiters. When all were done, and, after a moment of silence, had passed out, the waiters themselves ate their meal, being under the care, for the time, of an assistant teacher.

Speaking for the boys' school more particularly, these ten years seemed to cover a transition period, in which some old customs were dying out and new ideas obtaining a foothold. Many things contributed to bring about these changes. The introduction of base-ball, and the presence of teachers regularly on the playground, had a good effect in promoting harmony of feeling between officers and students. The construction of ponds for swimming and skating, and other facilities for healthy out-door exercise, materially increased the comfort and happiness of the boys, and promoted a better feeling toward the disciplinary department of the institution. This was shown especially by the voluntary association of the boys for securing good order in the chambers without the immediate presence and surveillance of any officer. These "chamber organizations" form a pleasant feature in the history of the school. Although in after years the movement lost the enthusiasm which first gave it an impulse, and the organizations were finally discontinued, yet they served a useful purpose, since they tended to establish the principle of self-government, and the power of organization to enforce the moral sentiment of the best members of the community. The essential principle has reappeared in many ways, and power for self-government may be said to distinguish Westtown boys.

Certain forms of disorder, such as going beyond the prescribed bounds in a spirit of bravado and for the sake of adventure, now became more unusual; and he who continued these practices, instead of being lionized by his fellows as most worthy of imitation, began to feel, instead, that he had offended a certain moral sentiment of the school. This feeling disinclined him to boast of his exploits, and was a most effective agency in causing him to discontinue such practices. As the officers were less engaged in the detection and punishment of disorder, they were able to devote themselves more unreservedly to the intellectual wants of their pupils. These results were not all produced at once; but comparing periods of time somewhat remote from each other a marked difference may be observed, the change being in the direction of a healthier moral tone and feeling of individual responsibility.

The construction of the ponds above alluded to, added another illustration of the willingness of Friends to provide the means for necessary improvements when their desirability became manifest. This was a subject which enlisted the efforts of the students themselves, and chiefly through their contributions to the amount of nearly one thousand dollars were secured for this purpose. The boys also assisted by their own labors, and experienced a satisfaction in seeing their efforts crowned with success.

From 1865 to 1870 an unusually large number of pupils were occupying the various departments. This brought under notice more forcibly the want, which had been previously felt, of additional class-rooms for both sexes. The plan most in favor for remedying the difficulty, was to erect a building to accommodate the boys, and thus vacate portions of the main building for the use of the girls. Other plans were proposed, and some time elapsed before any was fully matured. No one was more interested in the movement than the then superintendent, Dubré Knight. But he at least was not permitted to assist in carrying out any of the plans. He died suddenly, on the morning of the 3d of Second month, 1868. In the course of a long life, almost wholly devoted to the cause of education, he had made many friends, and his death left a painful vacancy, not only at Westtown, but elsewhere. Joseph and Hannah Snowdon, who had before for several years acted as superintendents, temporarily filled the vacancies thus suddenly occasioned, during the remainder of the session.

The Yearly Meeting in 4th mo., 1868, authorized subscriptions for the purpose of erecting additional accommodations for the boys. A fire occurring just before, had made some rebuilding also necessary,—the boys' bath-house and play-shed having been destroyed. The contributions received amounted to $23,226. Work was at once commenced, a plan having finally been agreed upon. The school building was first used at the opening of the Winter term of 1869–70. It is situated east of and adjoining the boys' play-shed, a covered connection with the main building being thus secured; is sixty-eight by fifty-four feet in extent, with two stories devoted to school purposes, and has a basement and an attic. A large room in the basement, immediately adjoining the play-shed, affords additional space for exercise within doors during stormy weather. On the first and second floors are a study room and six recitation rooms. These are much more comfortable than the crowded accommodations previously afforded. The rooms vacated by the boys in the main building were now appropriated mainly to the use of the girls, and thus both schools were greatly benefited. Some of the space gained is allotted also to the teachers of both departments, who had previously no private rooms.

Again in 1869 the Yearly Meeting encouraged subscriptions in aid of Westtown. This time an excellent dairy barn was the result, finished in the autumn of that year at a cost of nearly six thousand dollars. The greatly improved supply of butter and milk has demonstrated the wisdom of that movement.

In the report of the Committee to the Yearly Meeting of 1873 occurs the following paragraph :

It is with feelings of sadness that we have to record the death of the Governess, Sarah W. Moore, which occurred on the 10th of Third month, after an illness of about two weeks. We feel that in her removal we have lost a valuable and faithful officer, whose exemplary Christian deportment exerted an important influence over the pupils under her charge, and was a strength to her younger coadjutors in the discharge of their duties.

It is a source of consolation to know that in the winding up of her useful life she was favored with a peaceful mind, and an evidence that while she had nothing of her own to trust to, she could rely on the mercy of that Redeemer whom she had sought faithfully to follow.

Again in 1876 they record the death of Martha Heacock, teacher of the boys' primary department. She had served very acceptably in this station for several years, and her removal was felt to be a real loss to the institution.

In 1873 the Committee called attention to the small number of persons, especially men, who, possessing the requisite qualifications, were willing to engage in teaching, and the frequent changes among those who did for a time seek employment in the school-room. Under the impression that inadequate compensation had much to do with this, they proposed the raising of a fund, the income of which might be applicable only to increasing the salaries of teachers. Two years later they reported that contributions to the amount of $61,000 had been paid in, and the income arising therefrom would enable them to materially increase the salaries. The fund has since received some additions.

Several changes have been made of recent times in the workings of the schools. These began in 1876, with the abolition of evening school in winter and the substitution of a quiet study hour. About the same time considerable attention was given to the course of study, resulting in modifications which brought it into more general use by the pupils. Next a plan was matured by the teachers for classifying and grading the schools, so that all the members of a class would pursue the same studies at the same time. This was adopted, and was followed soon after by a system of written examinations, upon which promotions are based. This was arranged to occur during the last few days of each term, and the oral examination was shortened to one day's work to gain time for this. The union of the two introductory departments under the care of one teacher belongs also to this period.

These various changes, so recent that it seems not necessary to describe them, have greatly increased the regularity and efficiency of the instruction. The class feeling and the prospect of a written examination have proved a healthy stimulus. The alteration in the course of study has induced a considerable number of students to remain and finish it. One hundred and thirty-four thus far (to 1884) have received the diploma of the institution. It is the aim, however, to render the instruction useful to all who attend, whether for a longer or shorter period, and, while recognizing the value to the school of the prolonged residence of such as remain to graduate, not to consider their interests alone. The true alumni of Westtown are not those incidentally designated by length of residence and intellectual acquirements only, but those who, having received any portion of their education within its walls, profit thereby and continue to cherish a kindly feeling toward the principles of the institution, as well as the institution itself.

The Westtown report in 1880 contained this cautionary paragraph :

In accordance with our previous practice the Committee has continued to give to those pupils who have completed the prescribed course of study at the institution, the encouragement and assistance which may be derived from its Certificate. But the desire has been felt to guard them from that which may tend to make them think more highly of themselves than they ought to think, or lead them to forget that they are then but entering upon the more serious responsibilities of life; and that the final reward of well doing is not promised to those who have obtained a name among men, but to the humble learners and doers of the Divine will.

In the summer of 1882 a Normal Class was organized in connection with the girls' school. It continues in successful operation, and is aiding to raise the standard of teaching in the Yearly Meeting. The growing tendency to seek for such instructors as have professional skill and knowledge, as well as general intelligence, indicates a more extended field of usefulness for this department of the school work.

Not only is the theory taught by the study of the best educational authorities, but actual practice is given, under the immediate supervision of an experienced teacher. Young teachers frequently take advantage of the summer vacations elsewhere to spend some weeks or months in this department.

Such indications lead to the belief that this experiment, the first attempt at normal instruction within the limits of Phila. Yearly Meeting, though small in its beginning, will be increasingly useful in improving the methods of instruction in all the schools under the care of that body.

Within the last ten years, more association by pupils of opposite sexes has been allowed ; the joint literary society which has existed since 1874, the union of the Latin classes and occasionally of those on other subjects, and the arrangement made in 1881, by which the pupils eat in the same dining-room with the rest of the family, boys and girls sitting at the same tables, all point to a willingness to profit by the results of experience. These changes have been made with caution, and not till the Committee were well satisfied of their utility.

CHAPTER IV.

WESTTOWN.

IT is impossible to record within the limits of a few pages all the steps in the growth of Westtown. As we look back over the past, we are forcibly reminded of the humble, teachable spirit in which the enterprise was undertaken, and can but regard its success as due to the watchful care of those engaged in the work, who, as they have kept close to that guidance which animated them in the beginning, have been enabled to move aright in enlarging the undertaking. It may be proper to add a brief outline of the school as it now exists.

The discipline of the school is largely paternal. Pupils are taught to govern their actions by considerations of right and propriety. Rules are found necessary, but effort is made that these commend themselves to the minds of all as the necessary restrictions of a well-ordered community. The opening paragraph of the "Rules and Advices" is as follows:

In all their conduct the pupils are enjoined to do right for its own sake, and because it is the Divine Will. This requires some sacrifice of self-interest and self-will; but it must ever be remembered that unrestrained liberty of action is incompatible with either civil laws or the requirements of Christian morality.

The summer session usually opens on the first Third day in the Fifth month, and continues nearly twenty-two weeks. After a vacation of one month the school again opens for the winter term, about the first of Eleventh month. One day at the opening of each term is devoted to the reception of students and the examination of those who enter for the first time.

The course of study covers a period of three years, and is equal to that of the best high schools. Greek is wholly elective, while Latin may be omitted by those who desire only the scientific course. The intermediate department comprises five grades for the boys and four for the girls. The recitations of the two sexes are separate, except in the Latin and some of the more advanced classes in scientific and English studies. The introductory department includes those least advanced of both sexes, and is chiefly under the care of one teacher.

The five weeks preceding the close of each term are devoted to review and examination. The latter is mainly by written work, and upon the result depends the future standing of each pupil. The close of the term is always attended by some of the Committee in charge of the school, and one day is devoted to the oral examination of several of the classes. Graduating exercises, if there are any, occur on Fifth day at noon, and mark the final close.

Pupils spend five and one-half hours per day in school ; and when not engaged in reciting, they remain in their respective study rooms, occupied in the preparation of other lessons. There are also facilities for study between the regular school hours, either in collections presided over by a teacher, or under restrictions imposed by the students themselves.

Lectures upon scientific and other subjects are delivered regularly during the winter, and frequently at other times. For the purposes of illustration, both in lectures and recitations, there is an abundant supply of apparatus. This collection received its first large addition in 1852, when some of the men teachers raised a sum of money by subscription and visited Boston to make purchases. Some of the pieces which then came to the school are yet in frequent use. Latterly, valuable additions have been made in all departments to keep pace with the improved methods of the times.

The mineralogical collection belonging to the school is an excellent one. Many specimens were collected by the officers of the school in former years, which have been increased by valuable donations from Dr. George Martin of West Chester, the late Jane Watson of Ohio, and the heirs of Isaac Jones, late of Camden, N. J. These together now form an extensive and varied collection. The space at present applicable is utterly inadequate to the display of these specimens, and many of them must remain packed in boxes until such time as the institution possesses facilities for their proper classification and arrangement.

The "Westtown Literary Society," organized in 1836, by the men teachers and older pupils, was for many years a source of great interest and usefulness. Bound volumes of "The Cabinet," the monthly paper published by the Society, attest the excellence of much of the work done by the members. A collection of specimens in Natural History, chiefly collected and prepared by the first governor, Davis Reece, was given into the care of this organization in 1865. Among the girls literary societies existed under various names until 1869, when "The Lyonian" was organized, and promised to be permanent. Its paper, "The Casket," vied with "The Cabinet" in the excellence of its contributions. Finally, in 1874, by permission of the Committee, these two societies were merged in "The Literary Union," to which all the possessions of both were transferred, and it is now one of the established features of the institution. Members are chosen by election from the older and more advanced pupils of both sides of the house; meetings are held weekly, and they are often occasion of much interest. Other societies exist among the younger students, but membership is restricted to their respective departments.

A well-selected library of three thousand seven hundred volumes is open to the pupils at frequent intervals, and encyclopedias and other reference books are kept at points so near their living rooms as to invite their frequent use by the students. The library began in 1806, at which time it was under the care of one of the older boys. It received material enlargement, and was first catalogued in 1856. It now receives additions annually, and is under care of one of the teachers, who gives personal attention to advising the students and directing them to suitable works upon particular subjects.

In the intervals between school hours the students are principally under the care of the governor and governess. Though children are not sent to Westtown in search of recreation, yet the various amusements resorted to are of no slight importance. The absolute necessity of some provision of the kind in any system of education is fully recognized. But little attention has been paid to gymnastic or calisthenic exercises, but this is largely compensated for by the free access to the fine walks and extensive playgrounds which they enjoy. In summer the boys have their frequent games of ball, and the girls other lighter games. Not least among the attractions of the place for the young are the facilities for long rambles near Chester Creek and around Walnut Hill. The belt of woodland nearer the school buildings has always been a favorite resort, the occasional cart tracks having been appropriated as footpaths. In this was the "Labyrinth" of olden time. During the summer of 1878 numerous paths were opened up, to which appropriate names were given. These are kept in order by the students, and are much used. It is the policy of the institution to preserve this piece of timber as a natural park, in which, by a few minutes' walk, one reaches almost the quiet and seclusion of a dense woodland.

The large farm, traversed by the winding creek and mill-race, and still occupied in parts by a fine growth of timber, contains many sequestered and beautiful resorts, well known to all Westonians, and connected, perhaps, with not a few of the cherished recollections of their childhood. Every year makes more apparent the wisdom of the founders of Westtown in securing abundance of land while it was yet comparatively cheap. Few institutions possess such ample facilities for varied pastimes within their own borders. So valuable is this feature esteemed, that less land has been cleared and brought under cultivation than if money profit had been the sole consideration. Of the 600 acres in the entire tract, about 125 acres, including one considerable belt of woodland, are under the care of the superintendent. This includes the playgrounds, lawns, gardens, orchards, etc. Several acres are attached to the mill, and of the portion under the care of the farmer, 75 acres are woodland, or occupied by the public road, which traverses the tract for at least two miles, and less than 400 acres under cultivation. On this portion a fine dairy of sixty cows is kept, and the abundant supply of pure milk and butter is not least among the blessings enjoyed by pupils at Westtown.

The skating pond covers about four acres, and in season affords exhilarating exercise for both boys and girls. The swimming pond for the boys is of equal interest in the summer. Foot-ball in winter and base-ball and lawn tennis in summer are the most popular games with the boys, and the last mentioned is also a favorite with the girls. These exercises contribute largely to the general good health enjoyed by inmates of the establishment.

Meetings for worship are held in the house on First and Fifth days. Through the Scripture recitations, religious readings, and the personal association of the officers with the students, as well as the labors of the members of the Committee, efforts are made to instil into them proper motives of action, and the principles of a sound moral character, and give a practical acquaintance with the doctrines and testimonies of the Society of Friends. Whatever may be the degree of success in these respects, although there may be among those who leave the school some who show little evidence of religious improvement by a sojourn there, cases are in no wise infrequent, now as formerly, of those who attribute seasons of true growth in the best life to the instructions received and the influences thrown around them while at Westtown.

In every department of the institution there continues to be a special and personal oversight by members of the Yearly Meeting's Committee. Originally that body appointed an acting committee of ten members, who had the entire supervision of all the departments. More recently, a system of rotation in the appointment of visiting committees has been adopted, by which all members are expected to attend at least once in the course of the year. There are also important sub-committees, specially intrusted with certain duties. Principal among these are the "Instruction," "Farm," "Admission's," and "Household" Committees, each of which reports to the General Committee.

The immediate surroundings of the house are those which come only with age. The fine trees which grace the lawns have become almost a part of the institution. Around them cling the pleasant memories of successive generations of students and teachers, and universal regret is expressed that any future enlargement of the building may result in the destruction of some of these. Another fifty years must elapse before a second "Maple Grove" could replace that of the present.

The main building, though good for some years of service, having sheltered the large family for more than fourscore years, and endured many alterations in that time, begins to show the effects of age. During recent years the minds of many have been turned to consider the advisability of replacing it with a new structure, in which approved accommodations and facilities might be afforded. It is no charge against the wisdom and foresight of Friends in 1800 that the building, which was thought an admirable structure then, is found inadequate to the changed requirements of almost a century later.

The aim has been steadily kept in view to place the price of board and tuition as low as possible, in order to be within the reach of all classes. The present price is $160 per year, about one-half that charged by other schools of equal grade. The average annual expense per pupil for the ten years preceding 1884 was about $214. The deficiency is made up from the income of invested funds, profits of the farm, donations, and bequests. From the two latter sources a considerable fund has arisen, the income of which is applied to assist in.

educating the children of parents whose means are limited. The fund is in this way productive of much good to many in various parts of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, but it is not the property of the school itself. The income derived from it is not applicable to the support of the institution, except as it is received in payment for the education of children entitled to its benefit.

But it has not been to the liberal donations of money alone, or even to these principally, that the success of the school has been owing. Primarily the praise is due to Him from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, and who, while He opened the hearts of some to contribute of their worldly substance to this cause, made others willing to incur the labor, anxiety, and religious exercise inseparable from the right management of such a concern. The continuance of this success will much depend on the maintenance in the hearts of Friends of that earnest desire for the preservation and true welfare of the children, which encouraged many in time past to labor faithfully for their good. If a succession of honest and devoted laborers can be preserved on the committee and in the officers entrusted with the care of this school, there is good reason to hope that Westtown shall continue to be in the future what it has been in the past, a place where the principles of purity and peace are upheld and instilled; that it shall be a home from whence may go forth sons and daughters whose upright walk in the world will say emphatically unto others, "Come and have fellowship with us, for truly our fellowship is with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ."

SUPERINTENDENTS, MATRONS, GOV-ERNORS, GOVERNESSES, TEACHERS,
FARMERS, AND BOOK-KEEPERS, WHO HAVE SERVED IN WESTTOWN SCHOOL.

SUPERINTENDENTS AND MATRONS.

RICHARD and CATHARINE HARTSHORNE were appointed previous to the opening of the school, Fifth month 6th, 1799, and left on the 16th of Twelfth month of that year. Some members of the Committee resided at the Institution for a few months, before other persons were appointed.

JOSHUA and ANN SHARPLESS were appointed Fourth month 1st, 1800, and continued until Tenth month 17th, 1811.

JOSEPH and HANNAH WHITALL were appointed Tenth month 15th, 1811, and remained until Tenth month 13th, 1818.

PHILIP and RACHEL PRICE commenced Tenth month 13th, 1818, and retired Fifth month 3d, 1830.

PENNOCK and SARAH PASSMORE commenced Fifth month 1st, 1830, and served until Third month 29th, 1836.

NATHAN SHARPLESS and MARTHA JEFFERIS began Third month 28th, 1836, and served until Tenth month 27th, 1843.

PENNOCK and SARAH PASSMORE served a second term, beginning Tenth month 27th, 1843, and ending Fourth month 7th, 1848.

JOSEPH and HANNAH E. SNOWDON commenced Fourth month 8th, 1848, and served until Tenth month 20th, 1858.

DAVID and RACHEL H. ROBERTS commenced Tenth month 16th, 1858, and retired Fourth month 16th, 1861.

DUBRÉ and JANE W. KNIGHT began Fourth month 15th, 1861. Dubré Knight deceased Second month 3d, 1868. Jane Knight remained until Fourth month following.

CHARLES J. and MARTHA D. ALLEN began Fourth month 30th, 1868, and remained until Fifth month 2d, 1869.

AARON and SUSANNA F. SHARPLESS commenced Fifth month, 1869, and remained until Fourth month, 1874.

BENJAMIN W. and REBECCA G. PASSMORE began Fourth month, 1874, and remained until Fourth month, 1881.

JONATHAN G. and SUSANNA R. WILLIAMS began Fourth month, 1881.
